MEETING CLOSES.

Evangelist M. F. Ham's Great Revival at an End.

Total Increase In Church Membership to Date Is 83.

Others to Join.

The great Ham revival closed Sunday night with another monster crowd packing the big Union Tabernacle. The results of the meeting as shown by the additions to the city churches up to Sunday have been as follows:

Methodist (3 by letter).....34
Baptist.....12
Christian.....12
Ninth Street Presbyterian.....12
Cumberland Presbyterian.....10
First Presbyterian.....4

Total.....83

The total number of confessions during the three weeks the meeting was in progress was estimated at 250 to 300. It is known that a good many more will join the city churches and many of the converts were country people who will doubtless unite with churches near them. Some were among the colored people who attended in large numbers, filling the left hand gallery at nearly all of the night meetings. Some of these will probably unite with their own churches.

The meeting as a whole exceeds any revival ever held in the city, except the first Jones meeting Jan. 1, 1903. The church members were greatly benefited by Mr. Ham's earnest preaching and the tidal wave of religious enthusiasm has reached into many of the country churches. The young evangelist is not a great preacher, he is not a polished speaker, but his indomitable energy, his unswerving industry, his fervent zeal and devoted spiritualism make him an evangelist of great promise. He not only preaches most convincing sermons, but his singing was a feature at many of the services. After Prof. Towner left, Mr. Ham conducted the song services himself, at the last few meetings, and did it in a thoroughly creditable manner. Some of his solos were musical treats.

At the Sunday night meeting the various pastors and other church people made short talks and there was a general expression of Christian fellowship and thankfulness to God for the great revival.

Mr. Ham left yesterday morning for Dayton, Ky., to begin a meeting.

RESULTS TELL.

There Can Be No Doubt About the results in Hopkinsville.

Results tell the tale. All doubt is removed.

The testimony of a Hopkinsville citizen.

Can be easily investigated.

What better proof can be had?

Mrs. W. L. Johnson, of 615 Jessup Ave., says: "My husband suffered for several years with kidney complaint which made its presence known by a most severe aching in his back and which often became so bad especially in the morning when rising or on occasions when he was obliged to do considerable stooping or lifting that he could scarcely move about. It occurred to him while reading an advertisement in our local papers about Doan's Kidney Pills that they might at least give him some relief, and acting on the thought, he went to Thomas and Trahern's drug store and got a box. The treatment proved the merits of the remedy. The aches and pains were relieved and other symptoms disappeared. I have the best of reasons to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and am confident that in every case they do all that is represented for them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Take only Dr. Caldwell's (Laxative) Syrup Pepsin, which is sold by your druggist in 50c and $1.00 bottles.

Smith, Whitney, Texas, writes April 5, 1902: "I have used Herbina and find it the best medicine for constipation and liver troubles. It does all you claim for it. I can highly recommend it." See a bottle. Sold by R. C. Hardwick.

Office Employees Not Needed.

All office employees of the Sharon, Pa., plant of the American Steel Company have been notified that after May 1 their services will not be needed.

A Dandy for Burns.

Dr. Bergin, Pana, Ill., writes: "I have used Ballard's Snow Liniment, always recommended it to my friends, and am confident there is no better made. It is a dandy for burns." Those who live on farms are especially liable to many accidental cuts, burns, bruises, which heal rapidly when Ballard's Snow Liniment is applied. It should always be kept in the house for cases of emergency. 25c, 50c, $1.00 bottle. Sold by R. C. Hardwick.

Shot to Death.

Frank Rose, the wife murderer, was shot to death in the State penitentiary yard at Salt Lake City.

RANK POISON IN TOBACCO.

Pure Carbon Monoxide Gas in the Smoke Is Deadly—A Medical Writer's Theory.

The medical fraternity almost without exception maintain that the use of tobacco is deleterious to health in a greater or less degree, says the Kansas City Journal.

Palpitation of the heart, disturbance of the nervous system, decline of physical and mental vigor, and resultant death are frequent and indisputable evidences of its evil effects; while on the other hand many people addicted to an excessive use of tobacco all their lives have enjoyed uninterrupted and exuberant health to the end, and finally died of old age. No one can describe the pleasures of tobacco nor explain wherefore he uses it. Whether it is exhilarating or produces a restful tranquillity he does not know. All that any habitual slave to it can say is that when he is not absorbing the fascinating, insinuating and irresistible weed in some customary form he is in a state of irritation and uneasiness. The use of tobacco is persistent and universal among pagan and Christian, barbarian and civilized races. To place an injunction or oppressive tax on it would excite riot and rebellion. Its use, however, is the least offensive of all bad habits, and it will take more than a doctor's warning note or a reformer's plea to throw it into the limbo of things forgotten and forbidden.

Nicotine has commonly been supposed to be the poisonous element in tobacco. But a new theory has been advanced by a staff writer of the London Lancet. He declares that only a harmless, infinitesimal portion of the nicotine in tobacco ever reaches the smoker's lips, but to make matters worse he contends that ordinary tobacco contains many compounds which occur in far larger quantities than nicotine possibly can, and of which some are undoubtedly poisonous. One ounce of tobacco, smoked in the form of cigarettes, gives one-fifth of a pint of pure carbon monoxide gas, and probably more when smoked in pipes or cigars. This gas, if inhaled, would produce symptoms very similar to those of nicotine. "The trembling of the limbs and the hands, the dizziness and stupor, the disturbance of the nerve centers and of the circulation, palpitation on a slight effort and the feeble pulse may be the indications of either carbon monoxide or nicotine poisoning."

Anybody may test this theory for himself by shaking up a few mouthfuls of cigarette smoke with a few drops of blood diluted in water. Almost immediately the blood assumes the pink color of blood containing this gas, called carbon monoxide. With smoke from cigars and pipes the effect is still more marked.

The trouble, however, with the experiment is this: It applies only to smoking—not snuff or chewing tobacco. Moreover, if you should mix health-giving bean soup, or mashed potatoes with your blood, in the manner above specified, it would cause as much change of color and as much change in normal conditions of the fluid as when carbon monoxide is used.

Didn't Know.

"It is odd, the way the various kinds of currency have settled into such local use that residents of those districts are not at home with anything else," said the traveler.

"For instance, Canadian money, though so commonly used in Detroit, would be refused in many cities. And in San Francisco gold is used almost entirely, to the exclusion of paper money. While there, not long ago, I went out with a cousin of mine—a boy of 12—to have some money changed. The boy was curious to know what I was about to do, and when I showed him a $10 bill, he said: 'Oh, that isn't any good; it's only paper! I found a whole bunch of that the other day, and I threw it away!'"

GENTLE BREEZES.

Greet The Guests At Inside Inn.

When the determination was reached to build a hotel inside the grounds of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, for the accommodation of its visitors' name, location and size were the next knotty questions.

Dictionaries were consulted, fertile brains fevered, but until the simplest, most appropriate name possible was conjured up in a happy moment of inspiration. So "Inside Inn" was adopted.

Location has been so satisfactorily selected as to suit the most querulous guest. Breezes blow over the spot. Trees shade almost every window from the rays of the summer sun.

Ten acres in the Southeast corner of the grounds are taken up by this colossus among hotels and it is one of the most picturesque spots of Forest Park; far enough away from Exposition noises to allow its tired occupants to readily court sleep upon retiring, and near enough to scenes of activity to reach them by a few minutes' walk.

After leaving the street car at the southeast entrance, a short walk past a bridged ravine, brings the visitor face to face with a vast structure of Oriental design and color.

Tall, slender minarets rise, graceful and strong, one hundred and fifty feet in air, glistening with white, red, green and gold.

A stretch of shaded verandah, four hundred feet across, strewn with comfortable rockers, skirts the front of the house. Porches stretch on either side a distance of eight hundred feet. Another four hundred feet of porch in the rear gives a continuous porch walk of over twenty-four hundred feet, nearly half a mile.

Some conception of the size of this Exposition hostelry can be formed by the statement that it covers eight and one-half acres of ground and includes nearly thirty acres of floor space.

To view it like another exhibit, just to walk it all over, and not enter a single room would take over two hours.

Inside on the first floor, is located rotunda, office, dining room, kitchen, buffet, food store, barber shop, haberdashery, cigar stands, flower booth and toilet rooms.

The rotunda is three hundred feet long by sixty feet wide. The dining room seats over twenty-five hundred people. The kitchen is the largest ever built, two hundred and sixty feet long, seventy-two feet wide.

Beyond, above and below stretch a vista of rooms, rooms, rooms, all good-sized rooms and all comfortable, well equipped rooms.

One thinks, after seeing them all, that the whole country might be housed there and in comfort, but already the problem of where to put all who apply is demanding consideration.

Vast as is this huge hotel, it seems as if each individual was in the mind of the manager for each one's comfort is personally looked after and no makeshifts are offered.

Visitors who have engaged accommodations at the Inside Inn may view the hustling crowd with complacency.

Theirs is a comfortable lot.

Whitewash Formula.

Take half a bushel of unslaked lime, slake it with boiling water, cover during the process to keep in steam, strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer, and add to it a peck of salt, previously dissolved in warm water, three pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste and stirred in white hot, half a pound of Spanish whiting, and one pound of clean glue, previously dissolved by soaking in cold water and then hanging over a slow fire in a small pot hung in a larger one filled with water. Add five gallons of hot water to mixture, stir well, and let stand for a few days covered from dirt. It should be applied hot, for which purpose it can be kept in a kettle or portable furnace. The east end of the president's house at Washington is embellish by this brilliant whitewash. It is used by the government to whitewash lighthouses.

Advice to the Aged.

Affidavit Required.

Frankfort, Ky., April 21.—State Insurance Commissioner Prewitt today decided to require of each agent of a life insurance company doing business in Kentucky, to make affidavit as to whether or not, since January 1, last, he has violated the anti-rebate laws of the state. An answer will be required under penalty of suspension.

Ballard's Horehound Syrup.

Immediately relieves hoarse, croupy, cough, oppressed, rattling, rasping and difficult breathing. Henry Stearns, drugist, Shullsburg, Wis., writes, May 20, 1901: "I have been selling Ballard's Horehound Syrup for two years, and have never had a preparation that has given better satisfaction. I notice that when I sell a bottle they come back for more. I can honestly recommend it." 25c, 50c, $1.00. Sold by R. C. Hardwick.

Might be Foul Play.

F. H. Haley, of Indianapolis, mysteriously disappeared from Henderson, and it is feared he has met with foul play.

Cures Coughs and Colds.

Mrs. C. Peterson, 625 Lake St., Topeka, Kansas, says: "Of all cough remedies Ballard's Horehound Syrup is my favorite; it has done and will do all that is claimed for it—to speedily cure all coughs and colds—and it is so sweet and pleasant to the taste." 25c, 50c, $1.00 bottle. Sold by R. C. Hardwick.

Buying Warships.

Russia is said to be negotiating with Greece and Argentina for the purchase of warships.

Spring fever is simply "that tired feeling," a lassitude caused by a sluggish condition of the blood. The liver and bowels need a cleaning out in the spring and nothing is so effective and at the same time so pleasant to take as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is sold by all druggists.

Cracking Hickorynuts.

Hickorynuts are deservedly a favorite among the nuts, but it is not every cook who will spend the time required for shelling the nuts. A little trick that is worth knowing in this connection is this: If boiling water is poured over the nuts and then allowed to remain immersed for twenty minutes before cracking, it will be an easy matter to extract the nut meats.—Cooking Club.

Feeding the Chicks.

There is perhaps no subject of more importance to the poultryman at this time than the feeding and care of the young chicks. By far the greater part of the chicken crop for 1904 will be hatched this month, and in more cases success or failure will depend upon the feed and care they receive the first three or four weeks of their existence.

Assuming that the breeding stock is in a thrifty, vigorous condition—and certainly eggs from no other should be set—the chicks, if they have been hatched under average conditions, come into the world with everything favorable to a healthy growth from the start. It is just at this point where so many beginners fail; the young stock do not grow off well, many of them die and the disgusted amateur declares there's nothing in the business.

Having been reasonably successful at Oakhurst Farm, it may be of interest to some to know the method we employ. Whether hatched in incubators or under hens, the feeding for the first week is about the same.

We believe absolutely in dry feeding. The first feed may be either rolled oats, pin-head oat meal or hard boiled eggs. We have tried all three and have never been able to see any difference in results. We find nothing until the chicks are 26 hours old, some wait even longer but our experience has been that this is long enough. The floor of the coop or brooder is covered with sand and fresh water is given them from the first. For the first three or four days we feed but little, as in our opinion the chicks do better if closely brooded during this period. We prefer to feed four times a day and after the third or fourth day the feed is given in chaff from the barn loft, or straw cut in short lengths. The sooner the chicks begin to scratch, the sooner the development begins that is the foundation of the strong sturdy fowl. The feed for the first week consists of the oat meal or oat flake, the hard boiled egg, if used at all being given only for the first meal. We have also used some of the prepared chick foods with good results.

When the chicks are a week old, beef scraps are kept before them all the time, and their feed is changed to cracked wheat and corn. Occasionally they are given a feed of corn bread prepared the same as for the table, and from the time they are two weeks old they are given a very little fresh cut bone once a day about three times a week. After they are five or six weeks old, feed boppers containing cracked corn, bran and beef scraps in separate compartments, are placed where they can help themselves at all times, and except the green bone every other day, and wheat at night, are given no other food. The cracked corn and bran are slightly salted, as we believe this essential to the proper development of the chick.

With a grass run, three foods will furnish every element required to build up the strong frame that makes the chief difference between the properly and improperly matured specimen. Having these foods where they can eat at will the chicks balance their own rations as nature dictates, and the busy poultryman is able to achieve better results with far less labor than by any other method.

Powers will of course be hanged, for the affirmation of the Howard case is a virtual affirmation of the Powers case, the same questions being involved in both. Taylor and Finley, the real criminals, are still at large and until they are caught, convicted and executed, the murder of Gov. Goebel will not be legally and properly avenged.

"I had salt rheum on my hands so that I could not write. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and it drove out the humor. I continued its use till the sores disappeared." Mrs. J. A. O. BROWN, Rumford Falls, Me.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

The county conventions in the sixth congressional district leave the outcome in a very unsettled condition. Rhinock carried Pendleton and Trimble and Smith carried Boone and Carroll. In Campbell, Kenton and Grant counties the supporters of Rhinock and Goebel held separate conventions and upon the question of regularity, the nomination will depend. The Rhinock forces will doubtless hold one convention tomorrow and nominate him, while the opposition will hold a separate convention.

Chas. E. Chaslain, a divinity student, at St. Louis, asked permission to marry, but after a heated discussion it was decided by the St. Louis association of congregational ministers and churches that he could not marry and retain his church. The majority of the ministers held that it would be too much of a burden for the young man to support a family and continue his studies.

FOX FARMING.

New Industry Which has Been Started in Maine.

One of the most interesting farms in New England is that which is devoted to fox farming in Piscataquis county, Maine, where large quantities of Foxes are bred for various purposes, largely for their pelts, but also for hunting clubs, menageries and zoos in various parts of the country. The idea of breeding occurred to the Maine farmer about three years ago. He owned a rocky, unprofitable farm, and had half concluded to abandon it and seek the great West, when he was asked by a stray gunner from the city if he ever caught foxes to sell to hunting clubs. The question opened up to him a new possibility, and he set to work to capture foxes, which were fairly numerous in that part of the country.

His farm covers about three acres, and this he has had thoroughly fenced with heavy wire netting, seven feet high, and buried three feet to the earth, that Master Reynard may not burrow out of his corral. Scattered about the farm are a number of small buildings not much larger than dog houses. In these the foxes may seek shelter if they do not care for their burrows.

There are about 150 foxes on the farm at a time. Those which have the finest pelts are killed off each winter at the time fur is at its best, and as the foxes are very well fed, these pelts bring the highest market prices. These range from $5 to $8 each—truly surprising rates when one considers that a good fox pelt eight years ago, brought but $2. The foxes that are not so good are sold at various prices to hunting clubs, menageries, zoos, &c. There is a steady demand for both the skins and the live foxes, so that business on the Maine farm is always good.

When the farm was started only the native red Maine fox was reared, but since the venture has proved such a vast success the farmer has obtained, by exchange, numerous other varieties of foxes including the silver gray fox, the Alaska blue fox, whose pelts bring the highest prices, being made into boas and muffs. No pelt of the silver fox brings less than $100, and that of the red fox not less than $30. Some of the common red fox pelts are dyed brown or black, and thus bring a handsome price.

SUNDAY TRAINS ON T. C.

To be Operated Between Hopkinsville And Nashville.

It is practically certain that within the next week or so the Tennessee Central will inaugurate a Sunday excursion train over its Western division. The train will run between Nashville and Hopkinsville, and plans for putting it on are being discussed. The demands for such a service along the line are such as to seemingly insure its success, and the management of the road will more than likely accede to them.—Leaf-Chronicle.

HOWARD CASE

Affirmed by the Court of Appeals
Third Time.

Opinion Was Delivered By Judge Settle—Republican Judges Dissent.

Frankfort, Ky., April 22.—The Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Judge Settle, today passed for the third time on the case of Jim Howard, affirming the sentence passed by the Franklin Circuit Court, condemning him to life imprisonment for the killing of William Goebel.

Chief Justice Burnam and Judge O'Rear dissented from the opinion. By Judge Settle.

In affirming the lower court's decision Judge Settle delivered an opinion covering each of the twenty-one points raised by the defense in the petition for a reversal. Judge Settle holds that it is unnecessary for the court to pass upon the manner of summoning the jury, and that the lower court properly excused Juror J. C. Alexander after he had expressed an opinion. The question of the alibi was not discussed.

The testimony of Henry E. Youtsey, Frank Cecil and Jones and Day is held to be competent as accepted. The instructions to the jury are upheld. The vital points of the decision in the case were thus all decided adversely to Howard.

Jim Howard is from Clay county, and is a mountaineer of striking personal appearance. When he heard he had been indicted for complicity in the murder of Goebel he came to Frankfort and surrendered. On his first trial he was condemned to die, but the sentence was reversed. The second verdict was also reversed. It was the third sentence for life imprisonment, which was sustained today.

GOES TO MARSHALL

Special Judge Brown Carries Moland Case There.

As a result of the motion for a change of venue in the Sheriff Holland murder charge at Murray last week, Judge Eli Brown, of Owensboro, ordered the case carried to Marshall county where he will try it on June 27th.

When the case was called Wednesday at Murray the prosecution asked for a change of venue on the ground that the sheriff had so many friends and, furthermore, that intense bitter feeling had been engendered as a result of killing, that a fair and impartial trial could not be gotten. The Hon. Eli Brown, who was appointed by Governor Beckham as the special judge to try the action, acquiesced in the motion.

Last night Judge Brown, Hon. James B. Garnett of Cadiz, Hon. Samuel Crossland, of Mayfield, and Wm. Reed, of this city, returned from Murray where they participated in the trial, Crossland and Reed for the prosecution, and Garnett for the defense. The out-of-town lawyers are on their way back home.

The case is a very interesting one and there are about 150 witnesses to give testimony, hence it will take about a week to try it when it is reached at Benton.—Paducah Register.

MORMON MISSIONARY

HE VISITS EVERY CIVILIZED COUNTRY OF THE GLOBE.

And Finds a Reward for His Labor Wherever He Preaches the Word of His Faith.

He labors far and wide, and that his efforts are not fruitless is evidenced by the large number of converts yearly added to the Mormon sect. The southern states of our own land have proven especially impressionable in this matter; and thousands of emigrants from the old world enter the United States bound for Utah and the religion followed by Utah's chief people.

In nearly all the large cities of this country Mormon missionaries are at work, and in the country districts of the south, noticeably among the mountaineers of Tennessee, have they reaped large harvests of followers. The potent classes of Great Britain, too, and Scandinavia have been not a little influenced by Mormon preaching, in the respective lands in which they dwell, and are seeking under Mormon leadership the wealth and happiness promised them if they would migrate to Deseret,
"land of the honey bee."

A recent dispatch from Copenhagen reported the Mormon missionaries propaganda in that city had become so active they were distributing literature even within the Danish churches, warning young women to attend Mormon meetings; that one out of every 23 Danish emigrants to the United States becomes a Mormon. The Church of the Latter Day Saints, in the semi-annual conference held a short time ago in London, gave witness that its members were having a "most satisfactory revival not only in Great Britain (in passing, it may be said there are very few, if any, Irish among the Mormons), but on the continent." Mormonism has found many followers in Mexico, and also in the Hawaiian Islands, but in the latter place polygamy has never been practiced.
Mormon missionaries began work in Hawaii more than 50 years ago, and

MORMON CHAPEL IN HONOLULU.

Today there are a large number of Mormons on these islands, in all parts of the group.

It has long been the custom to send the Mormon missionary forth without scrip or purse. That he has returned often with riches and an army of followers suggests the zeal with which these men carry on their work, or at least the ingratiating manner by means of which they are able to make headway. One writer boldly declares that the missionary activity of the Mormons puts the Christian world to shame. The same author, Mr. James Biddle Halsey, says the Mormon evangelists are trained from childhood up, and when young manhood is attained the worker goes promptly to the field designated in America, Europe, Japan, Oceania, wherever it may be. As a rule, he is absent from home a couple of years, during which time he must support himself, and may have to undergo hardships and persecutions. Often he must learn a strange language, must get some understanding of foreign customs and prejudices. The missionary and his converts are provided transportation by the "Perpetual Emigration Fund of the Church," which loans in this manner to its new people.

To-day the Mormons have in the field from 1,800 to 2,400 missionaries, and probably over 1,000 of these are at work in our southern states. Those who have charge of the religious statistics of the United States report that it is difficult to obtain accurate figures of the annual number of Mormon converts, that the estimate for a late year varied from 20,000 to 65,000. Two factors minister to the success: the transportation fund that carries the convert to the Promised Land; and the wonderful system of the Mormon church, its centralization policy.

The early Mormons traveled 1,000 miles to found their new state, to seek a retreat where they could feel reasonably safe from molestation, but that 1,000 miles was a much longer journey than is their distance in this era of quick and facile transportation; and the emigrant Mormon of the present has to undergo no such material hardships as did the first ones to the land where "tradition says that was but one tree in the valley and a faint strip of green where the Jordan river threaded its way across the burning waste." That they often meet with disillusion and disappointment no one will deny, but the Promised Land certainly is much more fertile and fairer than that one of 1847.

THE CANARY

Was one of her husband's gifts to her in the early days of wedlock. She used to delight in his tells and dauntless, and think with Riley, that "The twitter of the critter 'peared to absolutely glitter." And now when the canary began to sing she says, "You must take the bird away where I cannot hear it. It makes me too nervous for anything."

It is a sad thing for women when they become a prey to nervousness so that the song of the bird or the laughter of children seems to shock them in every fiber. Yet this condition is a very common one, and is generally due to womanly diseases which are slowly undermining the strength.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures nervousness and other ills and aches that are the result of womanly diseases. It establishes regularity, dries unhealthy drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

"For two years I had been a sufferer from female weakness and uterine trouble," writes
Mrs. J. Muschinski, of Marathon, Marathon
Co. Wis. "Was so weak that I could do no work. Was nervous, felt down-hearted and had but little hope for recovery. I wrote to you for advice, and you advised me to take
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I followed your advice, and after taking six bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' my troubles left me, and I feel like a new person."

THE KNOTTED STRING

BY OLIVER STRANGE.

I may say at once that I do not expect this story to be believed, since even those who witnessed the corroboration of part of it gave my imagination the credit for the remainder.

The whole matter began with the following letter, which reached me early one afternoon: "My Dear D—: I have stumbled—how you must not ask me—upon something which savors so strongly of mystery that I hasten to submit it to your journalistic palate. The address is 53 Maroon street, wherever that may be, the hour six to eight, and the enclosed an 'open sesame' thought to what I have no idea. At least, there should be 'copy' in it. Yours truly, "H."

The inclosure was a piece of ordinary string, knotted in a fantastic fashion, and at first I was inclined to suspect a hoax. But H— was an intimate friend, and a good fellow, who knew that I could ill afford to waste any time upon an unprofitable errand. Moreover I was already indebted to him for several excellent subjects, for, being blessed with an independent income, he scorned newspaper work and wrote only for the monthlies.

I was not long in making up my mind, for, in fact, I had been in London for two months with little remunerative work, and my exchequer was too low for me to scout any possible chance for replenishing it. A glance at the directory showed me that Maroon street was to be found in the east end, and I calculated that I had just time to reach it by the hour named.

It proved to be a narrow, dirty street, shut in by big, gloomy warehouses, not more than half of which seemed to be in use. No. 5 in particular seemed to be so obviously deserted that I began again to fear that it was a practical joke after all. The dust-grimed, broken windows, the guiltless alike of paint and name, seemed to mock me as a fool for my pains. Could this be the right place, after all? Instinctively I felt in my breast pocket for the letter, but remembered that I had left it at home. The string, however, was there, and I drew it out and looked at it again. And then a strange thing happened, for the door of No. 5 opened noiselessly and a voice whispered: "Enter quickly!"

Too surprised even to hesitate, I stepped through, and the shooting of a heavy bolt warned me that retreat would be difficult. I found myself in a long passage whence wooden stairs communicated with both upper and lower portions of the building. It was but poorly lighted by a small aperture high over the door.

"The sign," whispered the door-keeper, with an accent which stamped him as a foreigner. Dismaying that this must mean my hempen talisman, I handed it to him.

"You are from Leeds, of course?" I replied. "Yes," I replied, for in fact I was born in the town named, though how this fellow could be aware of it passed my comprehension. He nodded once more, and with a wave of his hand towards the end of the passage added: "You knew the way."

This placed me in a dilemma, but feeling that hesitation would be fatal, I nodded, and stepped along the passage, wondering whether I had better go up or down. But luck was with me, for just as I reached the point where a decision would have to be made, a loud, harsh voice, speaking in a dry, accented, sounded from the silent depths of the building.

Once on the steps leading to the basement I was out of sight of the janitor, and I proceeded cautiously, being minded to see something of the company before joining it. The place itself was favorable to this, for the stairs led to another passage, stone paved and quite dark, save at one spot where a great rift of light came from an open door.

It was a mere cellar, large in extent and poorly lighted by three lamps swinging from the ceiling on joints. The furniture consisted of rude forms placed round the sides, and a table covered with papers, with a chair behind it, at the far end. Standing behind this table was a man who appeared to preside, and so far as I could ascertain, there were ten others seated on the benches.

The president was a man of about 30, with a clean-shaven, sharply-defined face, of the type that belongs to men born to lead their fellows. The eyes and forehead were those of a thinker, while the firm mouth and square jaw betrayed action.

"To-night," he said, "we strike the blow which will practically obliterate the reigning family. For 12 months we have been preparing, and now the time is come. Our friends are all in readiness, and immediately the news of the outrage, as the newspapers will call it," he smiled, "spontaneously, 'chomocos' known, armed bodies of them will forcibly arrest the members of the government and chief officials of the city, thus paralyzing opposition, since there will be no one to give orders. The same arrangements have been made for each of the towns you represent, and I have detailed instructions here for each of you to supplement those I have already given you."

He stepped from the table and began dictating what appeared to be sealed envelopes, and I watched him in a dazed kind of stupor. Then I remembered that on this very evening there was to be a grand reception in honor of a certain royal visitor to our shores, at which most of our own royal family would be present. What horrible conspiracy had I stumbled upon, and what should I do? Hitherto I had not considered the danger of my own position, and now a torrent of fear swept over me, and I prepared to flee and escape. At the same instant powerful hands gripped my shoulders and forced me down again, while a voice cried: "We are betrayed!"

It was the janitor, who had stolen upon me unawares, and his cry brought the others. I was seized and dragged into the light, where my captor related how he came down and found me crouching at the door. The president had again seated himself, and, held by two of the others, I stood before him, while the doorkeeper told all he knew concerning my presence.

"Where is the sign?" he asked. My pockets had already been searched, bringing little to light save a notebook, pencil, and the knotted string. The president examined the latter closely, and then, with a keen, but, as I fancied, not unkindly look, asked: "Who are you and why have you come here?"

Instinctively I felt that the truth would not help me, and yet I knew not what excuse to offer. I was still hesitating, when a savage voice broke in:

"What is the use of these questions? The fellow has been spying upon us for the last half hour, and his tongue must be silenced. I demand that it be put to a vote."

The speaker was a burly man of perhaps 40, with thick, coarse features, the natural ferocity of which was increased by a shock of black hair which encircled far on his forehead. His words seemed to meet with the approval of all save the president, who remarked:

"You forget that he has the sign; we do not wish to kill our friends."

"Let him explain how he got it and why he skulked at the door instead of joining us," was the sneering retort. "I demand the vote, Mr. President."

I glanced round at the ring of faces, all fierce, some with anger, others with fear, and felt that the vote would be an idle formality. And so it proved, for all voted for my death save the president. He, with a gesture of contempt, declined to say anything.

My sentence pronounced, it only remained to carry it out, but here a difficulty confronted them. How was I to die? It was one thing to act as judges and condemn, but, fanatics as they were, they recoiled from the office of executioner. Even in my danger I could not help thinking of this singularity. These men were plotting to plunge England into a seeth of bloodshed, yet they paused at the killing of one unarmed man. The president watched them with cold disdain, and then said, slowly:

"As none of you seem disposed to carry out your sentence, I demand that the prisoner be locked in one of the vaults, where he will be helpless to interfere until it is too late."

The expression of relief on several of the faces round me brought hope into my breast again, but the man who had insisted on my death sprang to his feet with an oath. "The man shall die!" he cried, and with the words buried himself upon me.

The attack was so suddenly made that I was unable to resist, and in a second my assailant had clutched me round the body, and with a terrific hug endeavored to throw me to the floor. Pinioned as I was, I knew that once down all would be ended for me in this world, and I devoted all my energies to the keeping of my feet. Time and again I was whirled about them as we staggered about the open space, but the tricks I had learned in wrestling days at school stood me in good stead, and, with all his superior weight, my opponent could not throw me.

The struggle was short-lived, for a moment later my enemy suddenly slipped his arms upward and clutched my throat in a grip of iron. Now indeed I was powerless, for with every movement the grip tightened. Since the struggle commenced there had been no sound from the spectators, and as I cast a rapid glance at the faces I could see to pity, only a blood-chilly fascination. We were now standing perfectly still, and soon, under the ever closing fingers at my throat, the outlines of the room became blurred, and I could see only the bloated face of my murderer, glaring with eyes which almost seemed to shout his determination and desire to kill me. Nearer and nearer the face came, until the gasps of hot breath scorched my cheek, and a mole on the point of the chin widened until it blotted out the hideous features, and I could see nothing but this huge brown spot. I knew I was dying, and in a fierce gust of rage I swung my right fist and struck at this brown blotch. It vanished and darkness came.

When I recovered consciousness it was still dark, and I was lying on a stone floor. My throat throbbled painfully, though the murderous fingers had vanished. Struggling to my feet, I struck a match and looked round. I was in a small, brick-lined vault, the only exit to which appeared to be the door, which was securely fastened. Evidently my last desperate blow had saved my life, and the president's suggestion had been acted upon. I must escape, but how?

The door resisted every attempt, and my shouts only produced their own mocking echoes. I flung myself on the floor and tore at it in a fit of madness, as I thought I should have left time to starve and the villains would accomplish their dreadful purpose. But, in stead of stonework, my fingers encountered the iron bars of a grating, which yielded as I pulled. Trembling, I struck another match, and saw a black opening in the floor, similar to the manhole of a sewer, from the bottom of which came the sound of running water.

Unlatching as it looked, I was too desperate to hesitate, and lowering myself as far as I could, I let go. The stream into which I fell proved to be both deep and rapid, and I soon found that I had but to keep my head out of water and let it carry me. Once, raising my head higher, I brushed it against the roof of the tunnel, and realized that unless I reached the outlet soon the stream would rise and drown me. Just as the thought came a gleam of light showed ahead, and a few seconds later I was dashed violently against an iron gateway nearly covered with water. It gave way, and with a sigh of thankfulness I recognized that I was now swimming in London's great waterway, the Thames.

The rest of the story is soon told. I was picked up by a police boat and conveyed post haste to Scotland Yard, where my tale aroused more doubt than anything. However, investigation was made, and, although the affair was kept secret, I know that an infernal machine was found in the royal banqueting room, timed to explode an hour after it was discovered. But of this nothing transpired, and no arrests were made. For myself, I was bound to secrecy for a period of time—which has now "passed"—and moved with a small but sufficiently welcome government position.

ELECTRICITY IN THE LEAD.

Gas No Longer Holds Place of the Most General Illuminant in This Country.

The public is accustomed to think of gas as still the leading illuminant, but, while this is probably true in Europe, says the Electrical World and Engineer, in the United States the scepter of light has definitely passed to electricity. The figures just issued by our census office are, indeed, startling. Gas had nearly 75 years' start over its competitor, but it now appears to be decidedly in second place. Yet there is no denying the fact that the introduction of the brilliant electric light has stimulated the use of gas. There are now close upon 4,000 electric light central stations in America, but by the census of 1900 there were then only 877 gas plants, and the number was not growing perceptibly. The gas plants were earning an income of $75,000,000. Last year the central stations earned $85,000,000. The cost of construction and equipment of both was over $500,000,000. Gas employed 22,000 men and the electric light 23,300.

But this is only half the story. It is estimated that there are over 50,000 isolated electric light plants in this country, and that they represent as many lamps as do the central stations. New York City has 1,500 of them, and some, like that in the Waldorf-Astoria, would run many an ambitious western city. Hence the figures against gas are doubled in most respects. The 20,000,000 incandescent lamps burning nightly become 40,000,000. The 400,000 arc lamps—Shelley's "insistent sisters of the day"—become 800,000. Were it not for the universal use of the gas stove and the prevalence of the gas engine, one marvels what would become of the illuminants of our fathers.

Such is the place at which we live today that while millions of people in this country have not yet got up to the stage of "civilization" represented by the use of gas, but when they encounter it casually employ it suicidally, other millions have outgrown and discarded it, and will have none of it even for a curling iron or a chafing dish, let alone for lighting. To put it briefly, the use of electricity for lighting in New York state alone has increased over 2,000 per cent in ten years, and the use of electricity for power, also from central stations, has increased in the decade nearly 1,200 per cent. And yet electricians are inclined to think they have only just started in.

Queer Drunken Manias.

A sheriff who died some few years since kept a record of the curious cases of drunkenness that came under his observation. Several habitual cases had developed odd manias. One man who had been arrested 167 times for drunkenness in 28 years had a mania for breaking windows when she was intoxicated. An old soldier suffering from a wound in the head always stole Bibles when he was tipsy. Another man stole nothing but spades, while one woman's fancy ran to shawls and another's to shoes. A man named Grubb was imprisoned seven times for stealing tubs, although there was nothing in his line of life to make tubs particularly desirable to him.

Thibetan Customs.

Kawaguchi Kei Kei, a Japanese priest who journeyed into Thibet, in describing the customs of the people, says that as a substitute for soap the men ordinarily anoint their faces with butter instead of washing them. The combination of the butter with the natural secretions of the skin gives to the countenance a lustrous black polish. The females do not use butter in this way, but boil down chips of techa wood, which is a species of mahogany, and with the resinous wax thus obtained, usually of two tints, black and red, they color their cheeks in a fashion that they doubtless believe renders them exceedingly attractive to the Thibetan males.

Happiness.

Happiness seldom comes to seek it on the run.

CAPT. R. T. McDANIEL

Victim of Paralysis in 71st Year of His Age.

Capt. R. T. McDaniel died at his home on South Main street Saturday night, April 23, after an illness of several weeks, a stroke of paralysis being the direct cause. His life had been despaired of for a month and the end was not unexpected.

Richard T. McDaniel was born in Robertson county, Tenn., Oct. 16, 1833, and was in his 71st year. He was of Scotch-Irish descent, his parents being natives of Georgia. They moved to Tennessee and reared a family of four children near Clarksville, Tenn. Richard T. being the youngest of three sons. He came to Hopkinsville in 1851 and in 1860 was elected sheriff of Christian county, serving two terms.

He engaged in mercantile business from 1860 to 1864, when he was elected county assessor. He filed this office and other offices in the county from time to time, to which he was elected as a Republican.

Capt. McDaniel was married in 1855 to Miss Sallie Lakin, who died a few years ago. They reared a family of eight children, six of whom survive them. They are Mrs. A. M. Cooper and Mrs. Sallie Richards, of this city; Chas. G. McDaniel, of Louisville; Miss Katie McDaniel, Superintendent of Schools for Christian county; Miss Lottie McDaniel, a teacher in the Hopkinsville Public Schools, and Dr. Robt. F. McDaniel, a young physician of this city. John C. McDaniel, another son, was a soldier in the Philippines, who died five years ago.

Capt. McDaniel was a member of several benevolent orders, including the Masonic order.

His funeral services were held at the family residence Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock by Rev. E. L. Southgate, of the Methodist church, assisted by Eld. H. D. Smith. The interment took place in Hopewell Cemetery.

SIZEMORE SUIT

Against I. C. Dismissed in Federal Court at Paducah.

The case of W. J. Sizemore against the I. C. railroad, which was transferred from the Trigg Circuit Court to the Federal Court at Paducah, was dismissed without prejudice.

While driving across the railroad track near Cerulean last fall Mr. Sizemore was struck by a train. He brought suit against the company for $5,000. The suit was transferred to the Federal Court upon motion of the attorneys for the railroad.

The Cadiz Record says the understanding is that Mr. Sizemore will file another suit in the Trigg Circuit Court against the railroad for an amount not large enough to permit it to be carried to the Federal Court, which will be something less than $2,000.

NATIVE OF VIRGINIA

But Had Lived in Kentucky Many Years.

Mrs. Virginia T. Wright, widow of the late Elliott Wright, died in this city last Thursday, after an illness of several months of consumption. She was about 70 years old and a member of the Christian Church. She was born in Virginia, but came to Kentucky with her husband when a young woman and had resided near Sinking Fork until last fall, when she came to the city. The funeral was preached at the Christian church at Sinking Fork Friday by Elder J. W. Gant and the interment took place at the Brick church.

Jackson-Major.

"UNCLE JOE" HIGHT

Dead at the Age of Nearly Ninety Years.

Joseph Hight, one of the oldest men in Christian county, died at his home east of Crofton yesterday morning, of old age and a severe attack of grip that hastened the end. "Uncle Joe," as he was generally known, was the head of one of the largest families in Baker's Mill precinct. His wife was dead, but several children survive him and many grand-children. The Hights are all strong Democrats and "Uncle Joe" was for many years county committeeman for his precinct. He was very old, being somewhere from 87 to 90 years of age. Until a year or two ago, he was hale and hearty and quite active for one of his advanced age. He ranked as one of the well-to-do men of his portion of the county and was prominent and popular. At one time he was a justice of the peace and was always a leader in affairs of his neighborhood.

BRUIN NOT MURDERED.

Body Exhumed and a Thorough Examination made.

As a result of the postmortem examination ordered in the Ed Bruin case, the three negroes held for the suspected murder of Bruin were released Friday by Judge Fowler.

Attorney G. W. Southall, who represented Laura Bruin, Martin Bruin and Rose Garrett, the prisoners, managed the case with skill and good judgment. He raised the point that no murder had been committed and proved that the marks of violence on the body were from old wounds in a railroad accident six weeks before his death. The court thereupon ordered the body disinterred and Dr. Andrew Sargent conducted an examination.

The wound on the head had stitches in it and the supposed cut in the throat was found to have been scratched in dragging the putrid body out of the water. The report sustained Mr. Southall's contention. He further proved that Bruin was frequently demented and advanced the theory that he had fallen into the river while wandering about in the night.

The prisoners were accordingly released.

APPOINTMENT MADE.

H. C. Hensley Named as Postmaster at Haley's Mill.
